Abstract

Introduction to The Problem: In Indonesia, there are specialized and independent institutions in enforcing business competition law. The institution is the Business Competition Supervisory Commission or KPPU. It is because the suspected of business actors who violate Act No. 5 of 1999 are often uncooperative. In assisting KPPU, the Anti-Monopoly Law mandates the police to enforce business competition law in Indonesia. But, the extent the police's role in helping the KPPU's duty became the arising problem that should be discussed.

Purpose/Objective Study: This research wants to discuss the role of the police in enforcing business competition law.

Design/Methodology/Approach: This research is doctrinal research (normative juridical); an investigation that uses a statutory approach. The legal material referred to in this study focuses on the primary legal content, namely Act No. 5 of 1999 on Prohibition of Monopoly Practices and Unfair Business Competition, or it often called Anti-Monopoly Law, and the Indonesian Criminal Law Code (KUHP).

Findings: This research shows that the police have the authority to uphold business competition law. The Anti-Monopoly Law gives power to the police in assisting KPPU. The provisions for the role of the police are contained in Article 36, Article 41 paragraph (3), and Article 44 paragraph (5) of the Anti-Monopoly Act. The role of the police to enforce business competition law begins at the time of the investigation or inspection process if the KPPU requests assistance to present reported parties, witnesses, expert witnesses, and other parties involved in business competition cases.

Introduction

Article 33 of the 1945 Constitution of the Republic of Indonesia generally stated that the economy should be organized based on economic democracy, which intended for people's prosperity. Thus, the land and waters, as well as the natural resources therein, are for the people's benefit (Tanjung & Siregar, 2013). It also tells us that in economic democracy, all must avoid various forms of unfair business competition

License Revocation of Insurance Companies and Legal Protections of the Policyholders

Abstract

Introduction to The Problem: Revocation of insurance company business licenses certainly has an effect on the insured as consumers who must be protected. In this case, OJK oversees the flow of revocation of business licenses, which requires insurance companies to report settlement of corporate obligations.

Purpose/Objective Study: This research discussed the types of license revocation of the insurance companies and legal protections of the policyholders when this revocation happened.

Design/Methodology/Approach: This study is a qualitative one, which uses a normative juridical method. It approached by the juridical research that uses primary data in the form of Acts or Regulations.

Findings: The types of business license revocation of insurance companies are divided into 4, namely: (1) cancellation of business licenses due to administrative sanctions that are gradually applied; (2) revocation of business licenses due to company requests; (3) dismissal of business licenses due to bankruptcy, and; (4) revocation of business licenses due to the merging or business combination. The respective procedures are governed by the relevant OJK Regulations. The repeal of insurance company business licenses certainly has an effect on the insured as consumers who must be protected. In this case, OJK oversees the flow of revocation of business licenses, which requires insurance companies to report settlement of corporate obligations.

Introduction

In this modern world, people tend to avoid risky things in their life, such as uncertain conditions (evenemen). The threat can occur to anyone because it is placed side by side in daily human activities. It has a speculative nature that is the possibility of losses and gains (Disemadi & Prananingtyas, 2019). The existence of insurance is one of the applications to overcome the uncertain circumstances that lead to damages. It is an agreement between two parties; both are the insurance company and the policyholder. The contract is giving premiums to the insurance company and providing compensation to the insured because of certain losses due to the uncertain event (Hartono, 1997).
