Comments to the Author
A Spatial Protective Control

This manuscript makes unsubstantiated and rather vague claims about globalization and the influx of international capital that are untrue. The authors attempt to illustrate the utilization of a spatial protective control theory; however the connection between the theoretical and empirical aspects of the research is rather weak. There is no literature review to speak of. The writing has mechanical, grammatical and spelling problems. Certain claims pertaining to religion are undecipherable. The role of government is only mentioned in passing. There are authors cited in the text who do not appear listed in the references section. It does not discuss the implications of the research for professional and or scholarly development.

Comments to the Author

Abstract : Abstract is well-written.

Keyword : Please add keyword (6-10).

Introduction: The background section of the study has yet to describe the research position on the relevant and current research results. So it is necessary to see relevant research results in various countries.

Method : This section is appropriate, But Construction of Theory has not yet elaborated on the Empirical Theory and Empirical Concept of relevant basic theories, for example compact city theory and the theory of place attachment

Result and Discussion : The basic theory, Empirical Theory, Empirical Concept and the findings have not been conducted a comprehensive review dialogue. In addition, there is a need for discussion that can explain the interrelationship between the findings with relevant research results from other researchers.

Conclusions: good, it's clear
