2ND INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE ON URBAN DESIGN AND PLANNING

The Covid-19 pandemic disrupts community activities; changes how people interact with others and space and the environment. Lockdowns and restrictions on community activities change the mobility pattern, orientation, and meaning of space. Emerging issues regarding poverty, health, environmental quality, transportation, public spaces, and the provision of isolated places must be addressed. This event represents our concern on the built environment intervention and socio-economic discussion to produce a transformative study towards creating more just, resilient, and sustainable cities.

This international conference is hosted by Universitas Diponegoro and collaborates with Razak Faculty of Technology and Informatics Universiti Teknologi Malaysia and the Indonesian Planning Expert Association. On this occasion, I also want to thank the organizing team of the Laboratory of Urban Design, Department of Urban and Regional Planning, Universitas Diponegoro, for their hard work and dedication in preparing for this conference.
