POLITICAL POLICY OF THE MIDDLE EAST COUNTRIES THROUGH VEXILLOLOGY ANALYSIS

ABSTRACT

The political policies of the Middle East countries were deeply affected by the presence of their flags. The Vexillology analysis pinpoints that internal and external conditions highly influence the history behind the country's designated flag and its change in the Middle East region which is bounded by the seven seas. In these Middle East countries, a flag demonstrates the country's political policy. This is different from other countries, especially Southeast Asia in which there is a tendency that the flag of a certain country bears no relevance with the country's political policy. However, in the case of Middle East countries, despite the fact that the countries are separated by state boundaries, they still highly retain their ideological equations. In addition, even though they have diverse ethnic inequality, the Middle East countries are still united in terms of ideals, with some exception. However, what needs to highlight is the fact that the Middle East is very conflict-prone. This research uses literature study and field research. The researcher visited a number of Middle East country's embassies to reinforce existing data for the validity of the research.

INTRODUCTION

The Middle East area provides us with a never ending story to talk about. It ranges from religion, culture, history, to politics. It is obvious that the region that encompasses these three continents has strong religious roots, since there are at least three divine religions, which are Islam, Christianity, and Judaism, that were born in the Middle East region. When it comes to religion in the Middle East it is certain that historical factors are attached to those religions since they are closely related one to another. With the diverse ethnicities that inhabit this oil-rich area, the culture becomes highly complex. Therefore, talking about the Middle East is not only talking about the Arabs, but also talking about Turkey, Persia, Kurdish, and Barber.

The same also applies with politics in the Middle East. Our mouth may never be kept sealed from commenting on the political intricacy and various interests in this region. Such issue may range from Sunni-Shiite conflicts, Turkish turmoil with Kurds, friction between Arabs and Jews, as well as the recent hottest issue that is the Islamic State of Iraq and Syria (ISIS). As the name implies, the area bounded by these seven oceans is situated right in the center part of the

TURKEY AND INDONESIA RELATIONSHIP DURING A.K.P ERA

ABSTRACT

Turkish-Indonesian relations can be traced back to the 12th century. Turkish Islamic scholars who visited Indonesia during that period played an important influence in Indonesian society. Turkey and Indonesia cooperate in a number of multilateral institutions and forums, including the UN, OIC, G20, D-8, and MIKTA. Turkey and Indonesia's relationship is close and multifaceted, with a wide range of areas for further cooperation. Indonesia is one of the founding members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN). Indonesia is the country with the highest percentage of Muslim population. Especially during A.K.P party foreign policy of Turkey shifted to conservatization, therefore Turkey and Indonesia relationship has become significant for foreign policy of Turkey during A.K.P era. Aim of this research is analysis on the relations between Indonesia and Turkey during A.K.P era. Methodology of research analysis of official statements both side, literature review and newspapers which published news regarding to relationship between Turkey and Indonesia.

Turkey Foreign Policy During Justice Development Party

When the AKP government took the office in November 2002, Turkish economic vulnerability was limiting its options in its foreign policy choices. According to Özdemir Ismail Cem, the foreign minister of two previous governments since 1997 signalled the change in the traditional lines of Turkish Foreign Policy. Özdemir notes "Cem's diplomacy can be traced in the main developments during his foreign ministry and it is impossible to understand today's Turkish foreign policy and the debates around the axis shift without looking at the preceding foreign policy decisions."^a What is the Neo-ottomanism? According to H. Yavuz many commentators believe

ABSTRACT

Project management continuously faces challenges in an increasingly dynamic and competitive environment. This demands for strong leadership by project manager that is fundamental and more crucial to achieving project success. Previous empirical studies have indicated the positive impacts of Islamic leadership on organisational performance and outcome in various sectors such as business, banking, etc, however no similar studies have been conducted in construction related and project management context. Delphi method is an option to the traditional and popular methods used for data collection in research such as interview and questionnaire survey. It is increasingly adopted in various areas of researches including in project management as well as Islamic studies that aim to reach consensus and decisive opinions on topics that are being researched by involving a group of panels or experts. This paper seeks to present the adoption of this method in a postgraduate study that has been conducted on the applicability of Islamic leadership principles (ILP) in project management with specific reference to JKR Malaysia (Public Works Department of Malaysia). Selected project managers with certain criteria were the respondents or experts for the Delphi interview. Two (2) rounds of Delphi interviews were conducted and sufficient to achieve the level of consistency of results. The findings indicated that Islamic leadership principles were highly applicable and it could enhance the likelihood of achieving project success in JKR project management. Acceptable level of consensus were achieved in all constructs attributing to the Islamic leadership principles and its strategies.
