I am OK with the omission, but i fixed the layout slightly.

In figure 1, the layout seemed to mistakenly transformed some part of the text (above the figure). I returned the text to its initial condition, and fixed the layout.

>>> If you would like to make any changes, please highlight them in yellow.

OK, please check the highlights.

>>> Also, can you please check again whether the references and in-text citations already match?

Yes, they are all in.

>>>Please send us back the article today.

OK. Please confirm that you have received the article attached in this email.

And please let me know in which volume/edition it will appear.

Best regards,

Prihantoro

Can you check the article attached and let us know whether this version is okay. We omit some part in the conclusions and suggestions because it contains basically the same ideas as those in the following paragraphs. Also, for layouting purposes, we changed some tables into figures. If you would like to make any changes, please highlight them in yellow. Also, can you please check again whether the references and in-text citations already match? Please send us back the article today.

Dear Pak Prihantoro,

Please kindly find attached the current version of your manuscript that has been revised by our editors. We have moved the first paragraph of your conclusion under Findings. We thought that the readers should be presented with the arguments earlier, and that the conclusion should not contain new points. We also have made some changes to the article's title.

Please review and confirm whether you agree to the suggestion or not. While doing so, please make sure that all cited sources have been properly included in the References (using APA format). You can still edit both the title and content of your article as long as you indicate it using the track and changes feature. Please also keep the changes made by our editors when you return the manuscript to us.

We would appreciate it if you could revise your manuscript and send us the revised version within a week.

Dear Pak Prihantoro,

We are writing to inform you the results of your article review. There are further revisions that you need to make with your previously revised manuscript as follows.

- Issues/items to comparatively analyze need restructuring so as the focus to compare across the corpora becomes much clearer
- Information around each corpus to compare needs presenting
Information around the analytic tools needs presenting (COCA and BNC have their analytic tools integral to the corpora, don't they?)

We would appreciate it if you could revise your manuscript based on the feedback and send it back to us within next month.

Dear Pak Prihantoro,

We are writing to inform you the results of the review. According to the reviewer, the data that you used were interesting, but there needs to be some revisions made with the manuscript as follows:

1. The significance of the study needs to be more adequately discussed in light of relevant theories and previous studies (Introduction section).
2. There needs to be arguments/data/ideas/previous studies that support the assumption made regarding the issue on the transfer from L1 and spoken language.
3. There needs to be arguments for the comparison with another corpus.
4. Discussion of the findings should refer to relevant theories and previous studies.

We would appreciate it if you could revise your manuscript in accordance with the reviewer's feedback and submit it to us for another review.

Sincerely,

Dear Teflin Journal Board

I wrote a paper in Corpus Linguistics and wish that it can be published in Teflin Journal. A week ago i studied the guidelines on the web, and it says to send both hard copy (by mail) and soft copy by (automatic submission system). I have followed the guidelines and i have sent the hard copy to the address written on the web at that moment. Today, I intend to do automatic submission via your system, but the website seems to be down. It shows me some php scripts. Is ----<http://www.journal.teflin.org>--- the correct address? Have you moved into another domain, or it is a temporary problem with the server? Just in case, I also attached my paper and CV in this e mail.
